"I'm an architecture enthusiast but a non-participant. It's so much more comfortable to practice without clients (and without a license). At times it even looks like I've drifted into city planning – but so has everyone else, to witness developments in the world.

As a native New Yorker, I'm naturally drawn to the skyline of Manhattan and other inspiring architectural icons. I'm pursuing the clichés and conceits of the architectural profession as well as the energy and the use of materials. This was a starting point for a series of paintings and pen and ink drawings. I'm merely taking some liberties with it, and with historically diverse forms of architecture.

In my paintings I've pursued a theme of civilizations existing on icebergs and subject to the vicissitudes of weather, sea and man. They're done in a realistic style that belies the unreality of the situation. Who knew? It may ultimately not be so unreal." - R.M.
